

Education Work Group Questions

1. Can we create an individual plan to educate, not a broad scope or category, concentrating on strengths and weaknesses, likes and dislikes, expectations and failures of our wounded warrior population?
2. Can web conferencing be structured for educators to provide a “one on one” training environment with patients and families?
3. Can instructional information be gathered and “warehoused” at a central point and disseminated to educators as a standard practice to improve consistency and awareness?
4. What educational resources are available that can be easily retrieved by persons with PTSD and TBI, and what formats, i.e.: DVD, brochures and pamphlets etc.
5. Can a unique web page be created to promote educational materials and act as a forum for patients to share experiences and treatment advancements?
6. What role can Telemedicine and Innovative computer systems play in increasing educational experiences and awareness that promote “Quality of Life”?
7. Can meeting places in local communities be set-up to provide comfortable group meetings with families and community educators on a routine basis? (Coffee Shops, Church Halls, Book Stores etc.)
8. Can the use of Virtual Reality models prove beneficial in educating the family with the nature and outcome of the patient’s injury?
9. Can a mobile library with computerized knowledge bases, telemedicine appliances be created for remote training in rural communities on a routine schedule?
10. Can promotional materials be crafted and sent to all Universities requesting the core curriculum for students in the medical fields to include studies in TBI and PTSD to advance treatment possibilities in this area?
11. Can we use appliances like “X-Box” or games for education and how?
12. Do we need a national spokesperson? If so, who do you suggest?
13. How can we implement the concept of having a “coach”, “mentor” available to an individual or family – on demand- “Simcoach”?